Performance Assessment Challenges

- The Commonwealth would rank about 60th on the Fortune 500 (based on revenues), along with Cisco, Comcast, FedEx, Northrop Grumman, and Intel.
- Establishing priorities and measures can be complex in any such large enterprise, but may be an even more complex undertaking in government where there are many shared responsibilities and significant levels of collaboration are required across Secretariats, agencies, and levels of government.

Concluding Remarks

- Virginia's strengths are rooted in her ability to continually improve and to respond to significant opportunities and challenges.
- Leadership is essential to encourage positive change and provide the right tools and incentives to promote innovation and productivity improvement.
- Meaningful change requires a long-term commitment: Virginia Performs continues to evolve, and full integration across units of government and regions is a challenge.
- Some next steps include:
 - Continuing a focus on economic growth and developing a high-level scorecard to improve assessment of workforce development;
 - Solidifying enterprise level assessment capabilities and ensuring that measures and targets remain aligned with high-priority issues; and,
 - Ensuring tighter integration of agency-level planning with high priority issues and enhancing strategic planning and reporting capabilities.
